

City and Guilds of London Institute
(Incorporated by Royal Charter)

The Medals awarded by the Institute upon the results of its Technological Examinations have on one side the arms of a number of the Guilds or Livery Companies of London, with the arms of the City and Corporation of London in the centre. To identify the arms of the Livery Companies, hold the medal so that the shield of the City is the right way up (i.e. with the sword of St. Paul in the left hand upper quarter): the arms of the Companies will then be found to be arranged in clockwise order, as follows:

INNER CIRCLE

Mercers' Company, with a figure of the Virgin Mary on a bank of clouds, and crowned with a celestial crown.

Drapers' Company, with three triple crowns.

Fishmongers' Company, with three fishes and two pairs of crossed fishes.

Goldsmiths' Company, with leopards' heads which appear in hallmarks, and two goblets.

Salters' Company, with three salt-cellars.

Ironmongers' Company, with three wedge-shaped ingots of steel, and on the chevron three swivels.

Clothworkers' Company, with an ermine chevron, between two habicks used for holding the cloth taut, and a teasel for raising the nap.

OUTER CIRCLE

Dyers' Company, with three bags of madder dye.

Leathersellers' Company, with three deer.

Pewterers' Company, with three roses on the chevron between three strikes of silver.

Armourers' and Brasiers' Company, with gauntlet, crossed and helmets for the Armourers, two ewers and three-legged pot for the Brasiers.

Carpenters' Company, with three compasses.

Cordwainers' Company, with three goats' heads.

Coopers' Company, with royne between two adzes on the chevron, between three annulets or rings.

Plasterers' Company, with treble flat brush, gauging trowel, and two hammers.

Needlemakers' Company, with three needles.

City and Guilds of London Institute
(Incorporated by Royal Charter)

The Medals awarded by the Institute upon the results of its Technological Examinations have on one side the arms of a number of the Guilds or Livery Companies of London, with the arms of the City and Corporation of London in the centre. To identify the arms of the Livery Companies, hold the medal so that the shield of the City is the right way up (i.e. with the sword of St. Paul in the left hand upper quarter): the arms of the Companies will then be found to be arranged in clockwise order, as follows:

INNER CIRCLE

Mercers' Company, with a figure of the Virgin Mary on a bank of clouds, and crowned with a celestial crown.

Drapers' Company, with three triple crowns.

Fishmongers' Company, with three fishes and two pairs of crossed fishes.

Goldsmiths' Company, with leopards' heads which appear in hallmarks, and two goblets.

Salters' Company, with three salt-cellars.

Ironmongers' Company, with three wedge-shaped ingots of steel, and on the chevron three swivels.

Clothworkers' Company, with an ermine chevron, between two habicks used for holding the cloth taut, and a teasel for raising the nap.

OUTER CIRCLE

Dyers' Company, with three bags of madder dye.

Leathersellers' Company, with three deer.

Pewterers' Company, with three roses on the chevron between three strikes of silver.

Armourers' and Braisiers' Company, with gauntlet, crossed and helmets for the Armourers, two ewers and three-legged pot for the Brasiers.

Carpenters' Company, with three compasses.

Cordwainers' Company, with three goats' heads.

Coopers' Company, with royme between two adzes on the chevron, between three annulets or rings.

Plaisterers' Company, with treble flat brush, gauging trowel, and two hammers.

Needlemakers' Company, with three needles.